

Hepatitis A

NO-COST VACCINATIONS

What is Hepatitis A?

Hepatitis A is a highly contagious liver infection caused by the Hepatitis A virus. It can range in severity from a mild illness lasting a few weeks to a severe illness lasting several months.

Here are some of the specific ways the hepatitis A virus can spread:

- Eating food handled by someone with the virus who doesn't thoroughly wash his or her hands after using the toilet
- Drinking contaminated water
- Eating raw shellfish from water polluted with sewage
- Being in close contact with a person who's infected — even if that person has no signs or symptoms
- Having sex with someone who has the virus

A $10 grocery voucher will be given to those receiving their first or second Hepatitis A vaccination while supplies last.
