AUGUST 17-18, 2022 | SEMINOLE HARD ROCK HOTEL & CASINO

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 17TH

8:30AM - 11:30AM

IFBTA TECH CAMP

TERRACE BALLROOM A & C

Instructors:

Rob Grimes, Founder & CEO | The International Food & Beverage Technology Association

Dr. Cihan Cobanoglu, Dean | School of Hospitality, University of South Florida

Lou Grande, Former CIO | Red Lobster & Past Chair, IFBTA

Skip Kimpel, Principal of Independent & SBM Consulting | ConStrata Consulting

The FRLA Summit kicks off with the IFBTA TechCamp. TechCamp is offered through the FRLA's partnership with the IFBTA (International Food and Beverage Technology Association) and is ideal for Independent and Small to Medium operations with limited resources to focus on technology. Those attending TechCamp will come away with an understanding of the basics as they make decisions that impact all areas of operations and management.

An onsite version of the IFBTA's CFTP Program (Certified Foodservice Technology Professional), TechCamp is a "101 Level Course" presented by industry experts representing leading operators, educators, and consultants. TechCamp is presented in 3-sections covering systems and applications that are guest facing, used behind-the-scenes, and required by management. Over 20 areas are covered, including POS, online ordering/delivery, back-office, loyalty, drive-thru, payments, digital signage & menu boards, labor, production, HRIS, data security, and many others.

Those who attend will be prepared to take the online test to receive the CFTP Certification from the IFBTA.

SALON EAST

Speaker: Melissa Hughes, Published Author & Speaker | The Andrick Group

The old customer service paradigm has been replaced with a more meaningful guest experience - connecting with guests in a way that makes them want to share their experience with others and creating the kind of brand loyalty that makes them your strongest marketing asset. We've learned a lot over the last several decades about how the brain works and subconscious forces that influence the guests' journey from first impressions to settling the tab. There is a wealth of research that shows why we like what we like, why we buy what we buy, and a host of factors that influence our perception of the consumer experience. Brands that understand those invisible forces are able to cut through the clutter and connect with the guest in a meaningful and memorable way.

Michael Lukianoff, CEO | Extropy 360

The restaurant industry is going through a digital transformation. Every area of operations has been impacted-from robots to mobile to food prep. This has helped restaurants to survive and thrive as we move past the pandemic. One of the additional benefits is that we have more customer information available than ever before. At the same time, restaurants and hotels are overwhelmed with customer companies have loyalty programs that help identify various cohorts. The challenge for them is that they have a limited amounts of identification fields and access to other data sources. Smart companies are using new ways to understand their customers and build stronger relationships. One solution is a Customer Data Platform (CDP). This is a powerful database that can import data from a variety of sources and can help identify who your customer is, what they buy and how often they visit, and coupled with external sources can identify their buying and spending patterns beyond one's operation. There are other resources available now that never existed that will help you with pricing as well. This panel will feature experts that will share how this rapidly changing landscape can be harnessed to your benefit. This will allow you to target specific customers in a curated manner, creating more traffic and strengthening your brand affinity.
